BE LOUD

HOW PRODUCERS BUILD $500 A DAY BEAT BUSINESSES

modernnostalgia.club

INTRO

Every producer dreams of quittingtheirjobandlivingoffbeats. The problem isn't talent.It'sclarity. The internet taught producers to vanity metrics(views,likes,followers),but those don't pay rent.

This book is a blueprint.
It's built on one simple idea: you canmakerealmoneysellingbeatsdirectly to artists while building a catalogreadyforfilm,television,andgames.
You don't need a majorlabel,aviralmoment,oramillionfollowers.
You need a system.

Throughout these lessons, you'll learnthatyourbeatstoreit'sabusiness,not just a page on the internet. Each beat can earn twice: oncewhenyousellittoanartist,andagain when that song gets placed for sync licensing.

Two new ideas guide this book:

Cul de Saccing: when you send listenerstodead-endlinkslikeSpotifyorYouTube with no next step, no purchaseoption,andnoreasontostay.

White Dwarf Metrics: numbers that usedtomatter,such as views, likes, and followers, that have burned out. Theyshine,butgiveoffnoheat.

If you stop Cul de Saccing your audienceandchasingWhiteDwarfMetrics, you can build something sustainable.
Something loud.

LESSON ONE: THE FOUR PRINCIPLES

Before you build a website or post another type beat, understand the four forces behind every sale:

1. Clarity: People must know within five secondsthat you sell beats, what they cost, and howtobuy.

2. Urgency: No one rushes to buysomething that's always available.

3. Proof: People believe othersbefore they believe you.

4. Repeat Buyers: One loyal fan who comesback is worth five strangers who don't.

Analogy: imagine your beat businessas a basketball game. Clarity is thehoop. Urgency is theshotclock. Proof is the cheeringcrowd. Repeat buyers are your teammates feedingyou the ball again and again.

Action Step: write these four wordsona note near your setup.
Every decision you make—from your website layouttoyour pricing—should pass through them.

LESSON TWO: WHAT SYNC LICENSING REALLY IS

You've heard the term sync, but let's break it down.

Sync licensing means pairing music with moving pictures: movies, television, ads, video games, or even TikTok campaigns.
"Sync" is short for synchronization.

When a song fits perfectly with a visual scene, that moment becomes memorable—and somebody gets paid.

Why It Matters

- It pays well. A single placementcanearnhundreds or even thousands.
- It keeps paying. Every time theprojectairsagain,you may earn royalties through your performing-rightsorganization.
- It needs freshmusic. Supervisorswantindietracks they can clear quickly.
- Exclusivity is king. Theyavoidleasedbeats because of legal risk.
- It buildscredibility. Oneplacementopensdoors that views never will.

Analogy: Syncislikerealestatefor music.
You create the property once and rent ittofilm,TV,andgaming companies that keep paying as long as it's used.

Action Step: tag every exclusive beat yousellas"one-stop" and "pre-cleared." That tells supervisors your music is readytolicensewithout extra paperwork.

LESSON THREE: STOP CUL DE SACCING

Cul de Saccing is one of the biggest reasons talented producers stay broke.
It happens when your link-in-bio leads to a dead end—a Spotify page, a YouTube video, or a SoundCloud link with nothing to buy.

Listeners might enjoy the beat, but then the algorithm takes them somewhere else. You lost them.
Your link should be an on-ramp, not a dead end.

When someone clicks your bio, they should immediately see:

- What you sell.
- A player to hear your beats.
- A button that says “Buy Now.”

It doesn’t matter if you use a full website or a link-in-bio builder; what matters is direction.
Every click should lead closer to a purchase or an email signup, not away from it.

Case Study: In one producer’s rebuild, the only change was swapping a Spotify link for a beat store link. Sales started the same day.
Action Step: open your current bio link. Pretend you’re a stranger.
If you can’t figure out what to do in five seconds, fix it tonight.

LESSON FOUR: WHY EXCLUSIVES AND SYNC WIN

Most producers start by leasing beats for twenty or thirty dollars. It looks like easy money until you realize you're competing with thousands of people doing the same thing. When everyone sells the same beat to everyone else, it loses value.

Exclusives build trust and opportunity.

● Artists want ownership. When a beat is theirsalone, they care more about finishing and promotingtherecord.

● Music supervisors need clean rights. Theywillnotclear a song if ten other rappers used the sameinstrumental.

● Exclusives turn your drop intoaneventinstead of a discount rack.

Analogy: Leasing beats is like fast food—quick,cheap,forgettable. Selling exclusives is like a chef's table: limited seats, higher value, real experience.

Action Step:

Create a rotation. Drop ten exclusives each Friday at a low starting price.Every time one sells, raise the price slightly. Scarcity creates urgency and shows your valuerising with demand.

LESSON FIVE: CREATE URGENCY

Without urgency, even great beats sit untouched. Urgency makes people act today.

You can build urgency in simple ways:

- Add a countdown timer on your site: Next Beat Drop Friday at 6AM.
- Show limited quantity: Only10 exclusives this week.
- Raise prices as beats sell: Priceincreases after each purchase.

For leasing producers, urgency can mean expiring discounts. For custom work, it means limiting the number of commissions each month.

Analogy: Urgency turns a quiet store into a line out the door. People want what feels temporary.

Checklist:

- ☐ Set a public drop schedule
- ☐ Add a visual countdown
- ☐ Post reminders as the timer runs out

LESSON SIX: BUILD PROOF

You might be talented, but people buy trust, and proof is how you earn it.

Show social evidence:

● Screenshots of buyers or messagesfrom satisfied artists

● Snippets of songs madewithyour beats

● Logos or mentions of placements,even small ones

Case Study: One producer started sharing simplescreenshots that said “Yo, I just bought this beat: fire!” That alone doubledsaleswithin a month.

If you have no clients yet, use yourself. Record overyourown beats, release short clips, and show results.

Analogy: Proof is the crowd outside the restaurant. Thefoodsmells good because other people are already eating.

Action Step:
Post one new piece of proof every week: testimonial, screenshot, or behind-the-scenes clip.

LESSON SEVEN: COLLECT FANS, NOT JUST BUYERS

Most producers chase new customers every day.The smarter ones build a list so customers come back.

An email or text list is your private audience.Algorithms can't block it or bury it.

Start small:

- Add a sign-up box that says "Jointhe Beat Drop List for first dibs."
- Offer something free, likealoop pack or discount code.
- Send three short messages each week:ahype preview, the drop, and a weekend reminder.

Analogy: Your list is your neighborhood. Strangerspass by, but neighbors stay connected.

Checklist:

- ☐ Create a sign-up form
- ☐ Offer a reason to join
- ☐ Send consistent updates

LESSON EIGHT: SELL MORE THAN ONE BEAT AT A TIME

One beat sale is good. Bundles turn that spark into a flame.

Producers often price everything the same way and wonder why they cannot grow. The key is Average Order Value, which means how much each customer spends per purchase.
Ways to raise it:

- Offer three beats for one hundred dollars instead of single sales.
- Add stems or tracked-outfiles for an extra fee.
- Create sync packs of five beats labeledone-stop and ready for placement.

Analogy: One beat is a snack. Bundles are a mealthat keeps people full and coming back.

Action Step:
Design at least one bundle today. Keep it pinned to the top of your store so every visitor sees it first.

LESSON NINE: STOP CHASING WHITE DWARF METRICS

White Dwarf Metrics are the fading stars of the music world. They shine, but they do not give off heat.

Real growth is measured by:

- Clicks on yourbuy button
- New emailsign-ups
- Repeatbuyers
- Dollars earned,nothearts tapped

A thousand likes do not equal one paying fan.Focus on numbers that mean survival.

Analogy: Imagine staring at a star that looks brightbut died long ago. That is what bragging about views feelslike.

Checklist:

□ Track sales and sign-ups weekly
□ Stop checking likes every hour
□ Celebrate real conversions, not empty numbers

LESSON TEN: GET MORE TRAFFIC

You cannot make sales without people walking past your door. Traffic is that foot traffic.

Ways to bring more eyes:

● Post short clips on TikTok, Reels, or Shortsshowing the beat being made or performed.

● Run small ads onyour best posts.

● Collaborate with indie artistswho tag you in their content.

● Use search terms like “type beat”wisely in titles and descriptions.

Analogy: A store on a quiet street closes fast. A store in a busy market stays open for years.

Action Step:
Pick one platform and post daily for thirty days. Focus on consistency, not perfection.

LESSON ELEVEN: YOUR WEEKLY ROUTINE

Routines turn chaos into systems. A weekly schedule keeps your business moving even when motivation fades.

Monday and Tuesday: tease your next drop, update countdowns.
Wednesday and Thursday: post proof and collect new sign-ups.
Friday: release ten new exclusives, reset the timer, send launch messages.
Saturday and Sunday: post beat breakdowns, drop prompts, and reminder emails.
Analogy: Think of your week like a loop. You lay the drums early, drop the melody midweek, and let it ride out strong every Friday.

Checklist:

- ☐ Plan next week's drop
- ☐ Schedule emails
- ☐ Record short videos for content

LESSON TWELVE: BEYOND BEATS

Beats are the door, not the house. Oncetraffic and trust grow, expand.

Ideas that branch fromyour beat store:

- Sell loop packsorsample kits.
- Release merch tiedto your drops.
- Host writing campsor workshops.
- Build a catalog of songsfor sync licensing.
- Create short educational content for newer producers.

Analogy: A tree does not stop at the trunk. Branchesmake it strong enough to weather storms.

Action Step:
List three new offers that build on your beats. Choose one and start planning it this week.

LESSON THIRTEEN: WHY YOU NEED A BUSINESS STRUCTURE

Making five hundred dollars a day feels good, but if you do it without a business setup, you are just hustling cash. The money flows in and right back out.

A structure gives you three advantages:

1. Protection. An LLC separates your personal and business finances. If something goes wrong, your personal assets stay safe.

2. Taxes. You can write off studio gear, plugins, rent, even travel tied to your music.

3. Funding. A registered business can build credit and apply for loans.

Analogy: Think of your beat hustle as an engine. Without a frame, it rattles apart. The LLC is the frame that keeps everything together.

Action Step:
Decide today what structure fits you. Research how to form an LLC in your state or your country's equivalent.

LESSON FOURTEEN: SETTING UP YOUR LLC AND EIN

Starting a business sounds complex, but the steps are simple.

1. Go to your state's Secretary of State website and register your LLC. The fee ranges between fifty and three hundred dollars depending on location.

2. Visit the IRS website to get your free EIN, which is like your business's Social Security number.

3. Open a business bank account using that LLC name and EIN. Keep your personal and business money separate.

If youcannot afford an LLC yet, begin as a sole proprietor. It is not as protective, but it gets you moving.

Analogy: Building your LLC is like tuning your studio monitors. It clarifies everything you hear and lets you work confidently.

Checklist:

□ File for an LLC

□ Apply for an EIN

□ Open a business bank account

LESSON FIFTEEN: BUILDING CREDIT WITH BUSINESS PROFILES

Once your business exists, it needs a financial history. This is how banks and lenders decide if they can trust you.

In the case study, a DUNS number was created through Dun and Bradstreet to start a credit profile. Then Net 30 vendors were used to build trust. These companies let you buy products now and pay within thirty days, reporting each payment to credit bureaus.

Typical vendor categories include office supplies, packaging materials, or creative equipment.

Analogy: Net 30 accounts are training wheels. You prove you can balance before anyone gives you a faster bike.

Search for vendors in your region that report to credit bureaus and make one small purchase

Action Step:

this month. Pay it early.

LESSON SIXTEEN: MANAGING MONEY WITH ACCOUNTING SOFTWARE

Money moves faster than you think. Without a system, you lose track. Accounting software keeps the record straight.

It connects to your bank accounts and payment processors so you can see every dollar that enters or leaves your business.

It helps you:

- Send professional invoices.
- Track expenses for tax write-offs.
- Generate reports that show real profit or loss.

In thecase study, QuickBooks was used, but you can choose Wave, FreshBooks, or Xero. The specific tool does not matter; what matters is consistency.

Analogy: Accounting software is your scorekeeper. You may feel like you are winning, but the numbers prove it.

Checklist:

- ☐ Choose one accounting platform
- ☐ Connect your business bank account
- ☐ Review transactions weekly

LESSON SEVENTEEN: TRACKING CREDIT AND FUNDING OPPORTUNITIES

You cannot improve what you do not measure. Business credit tracking tools connect to your accounts and show your progress.

In the case study, Nav was used to view business credit reports and discover funding options. Similar platforms include CreditStrong, Divvy, and direct credit reports from Experian Business or Equifax Business.

These platforms can also recommend cards or loans that match your current credit strength.

Analogy: Credit tracking is like checking your mix on different speakers. You learn where the balance is off before releasing to the world.

Set up at least one credit tracking tool this week. Check your score monthly and log your progress.

Action Step:

LESSON EIGHTEEN: THE LONG GAME

Once your creative and business systems connect, you move from a side hustle to an enterprise.

Here is what long-term growth looks like:

- Use business credit cards to fund ads, gear, and travel while earning reward points.
- Write off your business expenses at tax time to keep more of what you earn.
- Apply for larger funding to scale into studios, sync catalogs, or creative partnerships.

Without structure, money leaks through cracks. With it, every dollar works for you.

Analogy: Building your business is like learning to mix. At first, it sounds messy, but once you understand the frequencies, everything sits in its place.

Action Step:
Create a long-term vision board for your brand. Write what your business will look like three years from now and one habit you can start today to reach it.

CONCLUSION: BE LOUD

Being loud is not about shouting the hardest online. It is about building systems that speak for you even when you are silent.

When you sell beats directly to artists, you create daily income.
When you prepare those beats for sync, you open the door to long-term opportunities.
When you form your LLC, track your money, and build business credit, you move from a hustle to an actual company.
You do not need millions of followers. You need focus, structure, and rhythm.

Stop sending your traffic to dead ends.
Stop chasing White Dwarf Metrics.
Stop pretending leased beats are exclusives.

Be clear, be urgent, show proof, and build repeat buyers.
Protect yourself legally, manage your money carefully, and keep expanding creatively.
Sell real exclusives, pitch for sync, and release consistently.

That is how you Be Loud.

GLOSSARY

Average Order Value (AOV)

The average amountofmoneyacustomerspendsin a single purchase.

Business Credit

A credit profile that belongs to your business,usedtoqualify for funding, credit cards, or loans.

Cul de Saccing

Sending listeners to a link or page withnonextstep,nopurchase option, and no reason to stay.

Exclusives

Beats sold one time only, givingfullownership to the buyer. Needed for sync.

LLC (Limited Liability Company)

A legal business structurethatseparatesyourpersonaland business finances.

Net 30Vendors

Companies that let you buy now andpay within thirty days, reporting your payments to business credit bureaus.

One-Stop

Music that can be licensed with onesimpleagreement because all rights are cleared.

Proof

Evidence that builds trust, such as testimonials, placements, or screenshots of sales.

Repeat Buyer

A loyal customer who continues to purchasefromyou.More valuable than single-sale buyers.

Sync Licensing

When your music is paired with movingpicturesforfilm,television, advertisements, or games.

Urgency

The pressure that encourages someone tobuy nowinstead of later. Created with countdowns, limited offers, or rising prices.

White Dwarf Metrics

Vanity numbers like views, likes,andfollowersthatappear bright but no longer drive growth.

RESOURCE DIRECTORY

(Use your Linktreeoraffiliatelinkshere. These are thesamecorecategoriesused in Just Make Noise, adapted for producers.)

CREATIVE TOOLS

Beat Marketplaces

Platforms tosell beatsand connect with artists.

Examples: BeatStars, Airbit, Soundee.

File Delivery and Licensing

Use secure storage orcatalogsystemsto deliver files and manage rights.

Examples: Disco, Google Drive, Dropbox.

Design and Branding Tools

Createcover art,logos,and social templates.

Examples: Canva, Fotor, Adobe Express.

BUSINESS TOOLS

Company Formation

Register yourbusiness legally andget your EIN.

Examples: Secretary of State website, IRS.gov.

Accounting and Invoicing

Track incomeandexpensesfor taxesand reports.

Examples: QuickBooks, Wave, FreshBooks, Xero.

Credit Tracking and Growth

Monitorbusiness creditandfind funding.

Examples: Nav, CreditStrong, Divvy.

MARKETING AND OUTREACH

Email Marketing Platforms

Collect and communicatewithyour audience directly.

Examples: Mailchimp, ConvertKit, ActiveCampaign.

Social Media Tools

Schedule and analyzeposts to grow consistent traffic.
Examples: Metricool, Later, Buffer.

Ad Tools

Use small daily budgets topromote new drops.
Examples: Meta Ads Manager, TikTok Ads, YouTube Studio.

LEARNING AND COMMUNITY

Sync Education

Learn how placementswork andbuild music libraries.

Examples: Sync Licensing Insider, Master The Sync.

Producer and Artist Communities

Collaborate, trade feedback,and network.
Examples: Modern Nostalgia Club, online producer Discords, local workshops.

Courses and Mentorship

Invest in yourgrowththroughexpert guidance.
Examples: Skillshare, Coursera, YouTube University (free structured study).

CREATIVE EXPANSIONS

Merch Printing and Fulfillment

Sell brandedshirts,hoodies,and accessories.

Examples: Printful, Printify, Gelato.

Publishing and Distribution

Releaseyour ownmusic andretain ownership.
Examples: DistroKid, TuneCore, CD Baby.

Collaboration Platforms

Work with otherproducers,artists,andwriters worldwide.
Examples: SoundBetter, Kompoz, Vocalizr.

SUPPORT AND FUNDING

Micro Grants and Creative Funds

Searchdatabases thatlist musicbusiness grants.

Examples: GrantWatch, Creative Capital, local arts councils.

Credit Builder Accounts

Build credit throughsmall,consistent payments.
Examples: Nav Prime Card, CreditStrong Business Builder.

Business Loans and Lines of Credit

Apply forresponsiblefundingonce credit is established.
Examples: Local credit unions, business banks, community lenders.